Altitude records? 3,280 FEET? Why, after the first five minutes against Harvard the Yale eleven was 3,280 miles in the air and only starting to ascend.

It might be just as well for those who desire to spoof Yale once in a while to do their spoofing while the spoofery is so accessible. We have a hunch that after this season spoofing Yale will not take up nearly so much of the fashionable chit-chat of the fall and winter.

In the final test, however, Columbia held together and pulled out the game. It was as ticklish a second half as Columbia has ever been forced to play. Team work seemed to be wholly a lost art to the Columbia five in the opening half and what points were scored were made as a result of brilliant individual play. Burghard proved himself to be a capable centre and his scoring faved the day for the Blue and scoring faved the day for the Blue and white.
